Chapter 1

Twins can be wonderful things. But then again, maybe not. Being a twin can be a good thing. But, then again... maybe not. We had this view, Deedee and I... But we thought that being twins had advantages... identical twin advantages.

We were born on September 21, 1998. We had identical ears, noses, and pretty much everything else... except for our eyes. I have a green left eye, and a blue right eye. Deedee has a blue left eye and a green right eye. Weird, I know. Now, you may think that all this information has nothing to do with the story... at all. But believe me, it does.

Everything from now on, is top secret, unless you are our cat or our dog, Bibs and Babs. If you're not the dog or cat... keep this to yourself. Seriously... just do it.

Deedee and I are private eyes... ears, noses, and any other seeing, hearing, and tasting body part you can think of. Yeah, I know... You're speechless. We're detectives. We also are both seventeen years old and going strong... and we don't have boyfriends... yet.

Anyway, we have been through a lot of adventures, Deedee and I. Lots of dangerous adventures. Well, not really dangerous, more like stupid. But, this case was the toughest one so far, and the most dangerous as well.

I could say that our first real case was when we were twelve, but that wouldn't be right. I could say that we were having the best time of our lives when the case dropped into our laps, but that isn't right either.

Actually, Deedee and I were quite bored and hot. It was the start of summer, and we had already exhausted every book, video game, and pet. All our options were also very exhausted and all were also practically melted..

We decided to take a walk. We walked past the ice cream shop, all their ice cream was melted, it was that hot. We walked all the way to the abandoned offices, where our office was situated. Thankfully, our dad worked for the air-conditioning company and we got free air-conditioning. Deedee unlocked the door and we went inside.

I sat down, pooped.

"You know what?" Deedee asked.

"No, what?"

"We haven't gotten a case yet." Deedee said.

"I know! It stinks." I said sadly.

I shuffled some papers on the desk. Then sat down with a 'huff'. We waited and waited, and waited, and waited some more, and waited even longer. But, nobody showed up. We read files from years-old cases, and ate candy from last year's Halloween.

Finally, we decided to go home. As we came into the front door, we heard a footstep in the alley next to our apartment.
